ENTERPRISING WOMEN AND SHIPPING IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

HELEN DOE

Shows how, at a time when women were assumed to be confined to domestic roles, many women were in fact actively and effectively running businesses, including non-feminine businesses. The book investigates independent women entrepreneurs who ran shipping and shipbuilding businesses in the late eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, often managing male workforces.

BOYDELL & BREWER MARITIME & NAVAL HISTORY

NEW & FORTHCOMING

THE NAVAL MUTINIES OF 1797

Unity and Perseverance

Edited by ANN VERONICA COATS
& PHILIP MACDOUGALL

A reassessment of the 1797 naval mutinies in the main fleets anchored at Spithead and at the Nore, and in smaller units elsewhere, which argues that they were really a plea, which turned out to be successful, for better pay and conditions, and less harsh discipline.

HOW BRITAIN WON THE WAR OF 1812

The Royal Navy's Blockades of the United States, 1812-1815

BRIAN ARTHUR

Overturns established thinking about the Anglo-American War of 1812-14.

The book shows how Britain's naval blockade restricted US trade very successfully, severely reducing US government income which depended on customs duties, forcing the US government to borrow which it struggled to do, and thereby compelling the US government, on the verge of bankruptcy, to agree to disadvantageous peace terms.

HAWKE, NELSON AND BRITISH NAVAL LEADERSHIP, 1747-1805

RUDDOCK MACKAY & MICHAEL DUFFY

A reassessment of eighteenth-century British admirals, outlining the qualities which made for successful naval leadership, arguing that Hawke and Nelson were the outstanding naval leaders of this period, and that Hawke's very considerable achievements have been significantly undervalued.

This well-written book underlines the need to assess the specifics of leadership qualities alongside structural factors. HISTORY

SUSTAINING THE FLEET, 1793-1815

War, the British Navy and the Contractor State

ROGER KNIGHT & MARTIN WILCOX

Provisioning the fleet, and the army overseas, during the French Wars of 1793-1815 was a massive undertaking. This book explains how the Victualling Board in London handled this enormous task, focusing in particular on contractors – that is the merchants and brokers, who provided a vast range of commodities, as well as huge quantities of fresh water and coal, and every other item needed.
